HEAD SLUGGER TELLS INSIDE STRIKE STORY

*State's Att'y Hoyne Gets Sworn Confession of Bat
Masterson—William A. Cunnea Says Evidence
Should Bring Indictment of Police Officers.*

Six weeks now since the garment strike started and there have been sluggings, shootings, insults, anarchy and violence committed by city police and private police.

Today Wm. A. Cunnea, attorney for the Amalgamated Garment Workers, took to State's Att'y Hoyne the sworn statement of David Roy Masterson, better known as "Bat" Masterson, chief of special police and head of sluggers for Lamm & Co. and four other garment shops where strike is on.

Among allegations of Masterson are these:

That city policemen are paid cash every day for the work they do in the interest of garment bosses.

That the city police and the special police (sluggers) work hand in hand and when the sluggers want to beat up strikers the city police try to be conveniently absent.

That the slugging of Deputy Coroner Hermann was a frame-up put through by a picked crew headed by one Abe Katz.

That the throwing of beer bottles through windows of strikebreakers' homes has been done by wrecking crews from the P. J. Harding Detective Agency.
